

Welcome to EarthLinks at the Roots

A blog series on homelessness, sustainability, and what EarthLinks is doing about it!

About the blogger

Hello! My name is Ana Gutierrez, EarthLinks intern and Public Policy student at the University of Denver. I heard about EarthLinks after volunteering for many years in the non-profit sector serving homeless and low-income individuals. EarthLinks has opened my eyes to the small things that we all can do to live healthy and Earth friendly lives.

About the blog

I've created this blog series to help anyone, from people who just heard of EarthLinks to people who have been involved with EarthLinks for years, better understand the roots of what EarthLinks works with on a daily basis. For example, why sustainability is important, or what causes homelessness. It's good to understand that homelessness is an issue and sustainability is a need for the Earth, but it is also important to understand the facts and the background involving these issues. Information is power and understanding the issue strengthens the desire and ability to create positive change.

What topics you can look forward to in this series:
